We will venture to assert that there is no raticoed route in the world so favored as this in point of barfores, some of equal traffic—as largely paid—none so completely protected in its monopoly, and yet, with all these privileges and advantages, having that hitherto the orberance of the public, who are always averase to monopoly, even when well managed—this company take so the slightest poins to serve the public, or to the state of things cannot last much longer, people have become indiguant. We have heard influential and itermined citizens declaim, that if their time and more would abate this nuisance it should not be spared.

The Farmers Loan and Trust Company, appellant, vs. Lysander Curtis, respondent.

JEWETT, J.—The following extract of an opinion of the Court of Appeals in relation to the title of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company to lands in the Holland purchase, may not be uninteresting to parties residing on and occupying lands in that district.

The second ground of defence set up by the defendant in his answer is, that the plaintiffs never had the power or authority to purchase and receive a deed for the conveyance of the land in question from the Holland Land Company, or to take hold or convey the same, and therefore, if it fact the plaintiffs made a conveyance to the defendant of the premises it was illegal, frandulent and void, and formed no consideration whatever for the bond and mortgage. If then the plaintiffs had antihority by law, to take hold and convey real estate by deed in some form and under some circumstances, the defenses under this allegation in the defendant's answer, falls to the ground, for the reason that it does not show for what purposes the plaintiff's took the conveyances of the premises in question, and that they were unauthorized.

Assuming that the plaintiffs under some, although not nuder all circumstances and for every purpose, were authorized to take and transfer real estate by deed, it rested with the defendants to show by allegation and proof that the plaintiffs did not take or transfer the title to the premises in question for any purpose or in the form authorized by law, as in the absence of such allegation and proof its their plaintiffs did not take or transfer the title to the premises in question for any purpose or in the form authorized by law, as in the absence of such allegation and proof its the plaintiffs were incorporated by an act of the Legislature passed the 28th day of February, 1822, under the name of "The Farmers' Fire Insurance and Loan Company, with authority to make loans on the security of bonds and mortgage, or conveyance of improved farms, &c., or any other real esta and sale of the lands and for the payment of the deficiency by the defendant with costs.

The question of lumacy in this case, already referred to, was brought up before the Commissioners and a Jury. Mr. Douabty, it will be recollected, had become connected with what are termed spirit rappers, and with a female professing to be a "spiritual medium," putting up with an individual at one of our principal hotels, who pre-tended to have communications with a deceased brother, and a deceased daughter of Mr. D., also, that he had been appointed Postmater General, i.e. He gave to this woman $5,000, mortgaging some property to do so; and also paid her $8,000, to raise which he hypothecated securities, to purchase from the individual she was with, what is said to be a worthly as patent for cooling iron with copper. This medium is now at the West. After parting with money for latter, he appeared to become perfectly instine. He is now in the lumatic asylum at Bloomingdale, the Superintendent of which stated, that he still persists in asying that he had communications with him to be in writing. His property, he having real estate in Flushing, Brooklyn, and New York also, notes and secritives, is worth about $50,000. He has a wife about $5, two daughters, 16 and 14, a son 6, and a grandson, child of a deceased daughter.

To recover damages for alleged slander, amout laid at $25,000, already referred to.

CHARGE OF THE COURT.

Four days have been occupied in the examination of the witnesses who have testified on this trial. A full day has been devoted to an analysis of the evidence, its bearing and effect upon the issues you are to decide. You cannot be aided by a restatement of the evidence. I shall, therefore, proceed to state the rules applicable to the case, and by which you are to be governed in obtaineding the evidence and forming your verdiet. In some cases an active lies on proof of the speaking of the words. If they impute a crime, it is enough to prove that the words were spaken. So, if they impute outduct to the person of whom they are speaken, in relation to his particular trade or vocation, which, it true, would render him a worthy of employment, they are sectionable without proof that any actual damage has been sustained.

So, words falsely spaken, though not otherwise actions.

stonable without proof that any actual damage has been sustained.

So, words falsely spaken, though not otherwise actionable, become so it, in consequence of the speaking of them, special damage has resulted, as being discharged from employment, or being prevented from obtaining employment. In the two classes of cases first mentioned, all the plaintiff is obliged to do to entitle him to recover is to prove the speaking of the words. The defendant must then establish a defense, or submit to a verticet against him. In the last case, in addition to preving the words spoken, the plaintiff must prove that the particular special damage stated in his compliant was caused by the speaking of the words.

When such proof has been made, if the defamatory statement was not a privileged one, the defendant must either establish a defense or be subjected to such damages as a jury deem just.

The words spoken, if actionable to themselves, are presumed to be false until proved to be true, and malice in speaking them is inferred, and need not be proved, unless spoken un a privileged occasion.

The defendant is at liberty in all cases to prove that what he said was true. If he proves the charge to be true, in substance and measure, as he made it, the renth is a perfect defense, too matter how maliciously the charge was made.

It however, he states in his answer that he will prove it to be true, but falls to do so, such confinct is deemed an agravation of the original wrong, and justifies a jury in increasing the damages.

lish the truth of the charge, but tending to show that he be-lieved it to be true, and that he was not actuated by actual malice, in mitigation of damages, but not as a full defense. The defendant is at liberty, when such for a slander im-puting some offense, to show, if he can, that the plaintiff's greeni character is hed. If he shows this, it is to be con-sidered in estimating damages; but such proof is not an absolute defense; a plaintiff in such a case is entitled to recover his actual demages. No man is so deprayed as to suthorize any one to falsify and maliciously defame him with imposity.

with orise any one to fainty and maliciously defame him with impunity.

With these general remarks, I will call your attention to the words spoken in this case, reserving my views as to whether it was a privileged communication until the nature of the accumulous has been considered.

As a general rule, words spoken are to be construed, by Courts and Juries according to their natural and obvious meaning. If they are susceptible of two interpretations, one imputing a critice, or unworthy conduct of a person, in his trade or occupation, and the other not, the Jury is determine how they were designed and calculated to be understood.

Where they are ambiguous, or of doubtful import, the jury must find their meaning by the light of the circumstances attending the speaking of them, as disclosed by the evidence.

One part of the charge was, that "Mr. Fowles has be dermood.

"It "publicly known—manifest to the world—crivent." It is commonly used in an ill succes—as a notorious their, a notorious crime or ruce, or a man notorious for his lewdness or averice. Whether that is its common meaning, you will say. Was it used in that sense in this instance, and calculated to be understood as imputing that he had become such a light that he had be growed in public the relation of being a har? If designed god calculated to convey the idea that he had sequined with the public the reputation of being a har? If designed god calculated to convey the idea that he had sequined with the public the reputation of being a line." It was he general characteristic in the conveying the head sequined to the conveying the head sequined to the conveying the head sequined to the serious control of his reputation, the best public to convey the idea that he head sequined to the serious he may be seen at the head sequined of the speaking of the words. If satisfied that he did discharge him on that account, then the defendant is lishly, even on that construction of the words unless the charge is preved to be true, or the communication was a privileged one, and was made in good faith.

If the house of George M Wood would not have discharged him, which It is claimed they did him to the speaking of those words, and if, in fact, they servally discharged him, the perial had not the speaking of those words, and if, in fact, they servally discharged him, they have been discharged him in consequence of his communication, then speaking of these words and alculated to be understood as meaning that he he becomes such an actual liar in the performance of his duties as clerk, that his lying was notorious to his employers and other employer in their establishment, and that for this cause they could place hitle or no confidence in him. If this is the sense in which they were designed and calculated to be understood. Am alculated to the head of the proper from some improper motives. The burlen of provide the provided h

Whate ver sense you shall find the words calculated and designed to convey—were they true or false! If true, the truth is a defence. Did the defendant believe the charge to be true in the sense in which you shall find it was made! If so, did he make the statement in sood faith, and in the honest discharge of what he believed to be his duty! If he sid, he is not isable.

If he did not make it in good faith—if he made it from improper motives, or to grantly personal malice—he is liable, unless it is proved to be true.

aid, he is not inable. It in good faith—if he made it from impoper motives, or to grawfy personal malice—he is liable, unless it is proved to be true.

In determining whether he acted from good motives or bad, in the conscientions discharge of a duty, or from maine, you will take into consideration the whole evidence in the case. There is no evidence justifying you in finding that Bowen knew, at the time of the statement to Cole, that Fowlers had written letters to merchants in New-York in behalf of the house of Gee. M. Wood.

In determing the question of good faith or malice you may consider the letter written, the defendant's knowledge of it, the extent of his approval or despipeoval, of it, the nature of the lies alleged to have been took, so far as proved, the reputation which you shall find he had in their establishment, when it become generally known there, the length of time that he was subsequently retained, and the circumstances under which he was retained, the circumstances attending their alleged discharge of him, the syment of his salary to the lat of January subsequent, the evidence in relation to its being known that Cole had been to the establishment of Cerf. Beer & May, and all the other facts and circumstances bearing on the question of the motives which dictated the speaking of the words. If you find the defendant knew that the charge made, was untrue in any material points, or that it was in feet ustrue, and that he acted from improper motives, then the occasion furnishes him up protection for making the charge of any find he had been to the reading the words had, you find he acted in good faith from proper motives, then the occasion furnishes him up protection for making the charge of emberating or stealing their pools, or as imputing merely a suspicion that he had done of a suspicion only that he had oounget too be a duty, and did not know what he said to be false, he is not hable. In what sense was the other pasts of the words spokes, designed and calculated to be understood.

As impuring

lieved to be a duty.

As I view the case, it is reduced to a very few and plain questit no of fact:

First.—Was this statement, and every material part of it, made in good faith in Cole, and to perform honestly what the delendant regarded at the time as a duty be owed to Cole! If it was so made, in good faith, and from proper matives, the delendant is entitled to your verdict.

Second—If you find it was not made in good faith, and was sarroe, that it was known to be untrue in any of its material parts, or was made from improper motives, or to gratify personal malice, then the plaintiff is entitled to recoveriff in consequence of it he was discharged from employment if in consequence of it he was discharged from employment by theory M. Wood, or if you shall find that if was deligated and calculated to convey a meaning which would make it actionshe of itself, according to the rules which I make it actionshe of itself, according to the rules which I make it actionshe of itself, according to the damages to be swarded. The damages, in such a case, are to be determined by a jury, in the exerces of a sound discretion, upon a deliberate and impartial survey of the whole evidence. If estimated to a verdict, he is entitled, at all events, to recover his full actual damages.

If the charge shall be found to impute a crime or miscouries, the charge shall be found to impute a crime or miscouries, the charge shall be found to impute a crime or miscouries, that cause. If you will give such a may you think just and proper for that cause. If you also find that he was deprived of canformation in consequence of the speaking of the words, he is entitled in the case last supposed, to recover, in addition to such general damages as may be awarded for the mere speaking of the words, left you may be awarded for the mere speaking of the words. If you may be awarded for the mere speaking of the words, if you may be awarded for the mere speaking of the words, and postern tof the security is only capital; it recovers as it is sometime exp the evidence, under the rules which I have stated to be applicable to the case, and give such a venicit as in your justiment shall be just to those parties, upon a full and fair concensid ration of all the facts and circumstances affecting the merits of the transaction.

WEDNESDAY, March 23-P. M. The Stock market was moderately active today with generally a firm feeling. At the Second Board the feeling remained about the same without much movement. Nicaragua has been buoyant, closing sustained under moderate sales and closed at 84 after the Second Board. The other Railroads had an upward tendency, especially Stonington, which advanced to S6j. The Coal Companies are not active but generally firm. Large sales of Canton were made, 3,000 shares, closing at yesterday's rate. The Premium Stocks are quiet but firm. In consequence of the passage of the Consolidation bill the Stocks of the Central line are heid higher. There was considerable business done in Bonds, and Government, and State Stocks, without marked change. The steamer brought several lots of U. S. and State Stocks for sale at the high quotations in this market. Erie Bonds were firmer. At the close geon Bay. Hunt's Magazine for March, says: "From 1821 to the close of the fiscal year, 1847-8, the entire importation of foreign coin and bullion into our Union, amounted to $252,169,841, and the export of the same during that period reached $150,462,405. In these twenty eight years, there was accordingly a balance remaining in our chest of $71,707,435. This was the foreign accretion alone; while from our domestic production of the precious metals our mints received, in round numbers, $10,000,000; so that our total increase of specie from both sources, was $82,000,000, or about $3,000,000 a year. From the facal year 1848-9 to the present time, the imports of foreign procious metals, in coin and builton, were $24,000,000; while the domestic production amounts, according to colcage, to $165,000,000; deducting from this total of $189,000,000 the sum of $85,000,000, which we have exported, and we find that, in 44 years our specie currency has actually gained $22,000,000 each year, or a grand total of
